Parents Check List for Statutory Assessment

For a request for a statutory assessment to stand the best chance of success the information you and the school send in should include the following:

1) Name, date of birth and gender of child
2) Current school or setting – if not in a school/setting, and not too young to attend a school or setting, the last school/setting attended
3) Your child’s views
4) Any and all special educational needs e.g. Dyslexia, Dyspraxia, ADHD, Autism, Autistic Spectrum etc.
5) Reports containing any diagnosis
6) All reports from health specialists involved, preferably not over six months old.
   These could include:
   a) Speech and Language Therapist
   b) Occupational Therapist
   c) Physiotherapist
   d) Child and Mental Health (CAMH) staff
   e) Paediatrician
7) All reports from educational specialists involved, preferably not over six months over. These could include:
   a) Specialist Teacher
   b) Educational Psychologist
   c) Sensory Service support worker
   d) Portage Worker – Early Years 8) All reports from any other specialists involved, preferably not over six months old.
   These could include:
   a) Social Care reports
   b) Common Assessment Framework (CAF) reports
   c) Private reports you may have paid for 9) Information from your child’s school should include much of the above as well as showing:
   a) How they have used the Asses, Plan, Do and Review cycle to support your child
   b) The support services they have used to help meet your child’s needs, normally a Specialist Teachers involvement would be a minimum requirement
   c) How they have put into practice the recommendations from any professionals involved, that these have been reviewed and revised, if appropriate – to meet you your child’s needs
   d) The support they have been putting in to support your child. This should cover two areas
i. How good teaching, often called quality first teaching, has been used ii. How the schools SEND funding has been used to support your child.
   This should include the amount of money they are spending broken down into the cost of the various bits of support they are putting in.

Important points to remember

1) The decisions made are evidence based – that means that nothing is assumed, and the local authority can only make a decision based on the paperwork provided. In order for the local authority to agree to the request for an EHC needs assessment, the information provided needs to show that:
   a. Your child meets the criteria for a statutory assessment, and
   b. The school has used all its available resources, including outside sources of advice and information, to meet your child’s needs. It needs to be clear that without additional money from the local authority on top of this, your child’s needs can’t be met.
2) Your best chance of success is if the school/setting and you are working together to make the request
3) You can make a parental request for a statutory assessment but if the schools information does not support your request it could be refused.

On pages three and four is some advice on what you could include in your information in support of your child’s request for a statutory assessment.
